Jonathan Edwards, a British athlete who held the world record for the triple jump, was putting in some last-minute training before the Olympic Games in Atlanta. Edwards was not only one of the UK 's most famous sportspeople: he was also one of its highest-profile and vocal Christians — an Evangelical, who, early on in his career, did not compete on Sundays.

What causes people to lose their faith? - Church Times
Around 2007 Edwards was quoted as saying that he lost his faith and that his marriage was in trouble (I am simply stating what was widely quoted around the time). A few reports have even claimed him as now being an atheist but, in fairness, Edwards himself has not been too vocal on this so one cannot be sure.
